

ARkYvES

Login procedure

The Serendipity Engine

Cultural Heritage Sources

Arkyves is a collection of sources for the study of the History of Culture. aggregated database, but it does much more than passively wait for your questions. It actively stimulates knowledge discovery because it presents the items in its catalogue in ever-changing thematic combinations.

Ordering and re-ordering motifs, themes, stories and iconographic details in kaleidoscopic fashion Arkyves will make you find many things you did not realize you were looking for.

What medieval people thought crocodiles looked like, or animals in general. Do research on the concept of carrying someone on your back, or envy or love.

Look at the topsy-turvy world

Find some pictures of saint Francis, or of the effects of drinking too much, or of people wearing spectacles, reading and writing, or digging. Gather material for a study of childhood or old age, of the poor or the rich, or simply of cats, dogs, or wild animals or foodstuffs ... or a tableau of cats with fishes?

Interested in typography and printing?

Here is our collection of printers devices, ornaments and decorated initials.

On the Arkyves homepage you can choose to login or click on any of the hyperlinked texts or pictures.

Login

Help!

I forgot my password

Next, you enter your username and password (or ask for Help if you forgot it).

Would you like to see more?

If you do not have a login, or are at an institution that does not subscribe to Arkyves, let us know. It is easy to arrange for a trial.

If you see this page, either:

- You have a personal password but you forgot to login first,
- You are using a computer at an institute that does not subscribe to Arkyves.

In the first case you can here.

In the second case you may want to suggest your librarian or administrator to contact us at: to request access for a trial period. If asked for your IP address, the one being used for the computer you are on right now is: